AMC Networks International: We must have original stories with high-value production

The new episodes of the fourth season of Fear the Walking Dead are AMC's great bet for the second half of the year

Pablo Corona, VP of Programming and Acquisitions of film and series signals for Latin America at AMC Networks International, commented that the first episodes of the fourth season that were seen during the first half of the year have had good audience levels.

He announced that in these new episodes the stars, who had previously faced other humans and new walkers, are now facing climate changes.

We must recall that Fear the Walking Dead started as a spin off from the successful series The walking dead (that in Latin America is broadcast by FOX).

"As the series had more and more seasons, it has acquired an importance of its own, both the characters and the story," said Corona.

Along with Fear the Walking Dead, the channel recently launched a new season of Into the Badlands, the third of Human, it will also offer a second season of The Son, and a few days ago it has been confirmed a second season of The Terror and a fifth of Fear the Walking Dead. All these series are original productions of AMC Studios.
